Dear Congress:

As national, state, and local organizations - along with young people with lived experience in the foster care system - dedicated to the well-being of young people in and from foster care, we write to urge Congress to act immediately to provide crucial supports to older youth facing the stress and disruptions resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic.

Approximately 18,000 youth exit foster care without a family each year, and, unfortunately, the outcomes for these young people are discouraging even in times of economic prosperity. Data indicate that on average, two in five foster youth who “age out” of care will experience episodes of homelessness and only 50 percent of youth will be employed at age 24. The COVID-19 crisis will only exacerbate these dire outcomes.

FosterClub, a national network for young people from foster care, conducted an online poll of 172 transition-age youth from March 21 through March 24. The results are very troubling:

- 28% of respondents described their home as having a food crisis or being very low on food
- 40% indicated that they had been forced to move or feared being forced to move
- 27% of respondents had been laid off and another 40% have had their hours severely cut
- 18% indicated they are in a money crisis and 33% stated they had less than a week’s worth of cash on hand
- 23% said they wished they had more people to help them through the crisis, and
- 14% of respondents indicated that they are on their own, or almost entirely on their own

State and local leaders across the country are working hard to continue vital services and resources to older youth during these extraordinary times, but they face major challenges, so Congress must act now to address these needs. We urge Congress to consider the series of legislative recommendations provided below for inclusion in the next COVID-19 relief bill.

Proposed Actions for Federal Legislation

1. Increase Chafee Funding by 500 Million.

Funds from the John H. Chafee Foster Care Program for Successful Transition to Adulthood can pay for the vital resources and services that young people need immediately and urgently, but have remained at $140 million since its enactment in 1999 and only increased to $143 million this year. Providing a well overdue increase in funding for Chafee will allow states to meaningfully meet the immediate needs of youth and young adults during this crisis and help support them as they plan for their future past the COVID-19 crisis.

2. Extend the Age of Eligibility for Chafee Aftercare Services to Age 23 for All Youth.

Flexible Chafee funds can be used to meet many of the immediate needs of young people who are still making the transition to adulthood. These funds can help with immediate needs for housing, food, and other service supports that are so vital at this time. Congress has acknowledged the wisdom of providing these services to youth until age 23. Youth in all states should have the benefit of this opportunity for support.

3. Suspend Participation Requirements for Young People in Extended Foster Care.

Suspending the work, school, and program participation requirements for youth in extended foster care will allow youth to remain safe, healthy, and housed. This action will allow them to continue to receive placement and support services through the COVID-19 crisis so they can stay on track to meet their goals. Without this action, many youth may be pushed out of the system to homelessness and unsafe situations where their health will be at great risk.

4. Place a Moratorium on Discharges from the Foster Care System for Youth Ages 18-21.

By providing young people the safety and security of maintaining their current living arrangements and services, they will be in the best position to stay healthy and continue working towards their goals for their future. This additional time and support will help young people and child welfare agencies be able to appropriately plan for a successful transition out of care and into adulthood.

5. Allow States to Draw Down Title IV-E funds until a Young Person Reaches Age 22.

By allowing states to draw down Title IV-E funds after a young person reaches age 21, states will be encouraged to provide continued services for youth in this time of great need. This will help ensure that young people are not cut off from housing and services when they need it the most. It will also ensure that states have the capacity and funds to meet their needs.

We are aware that many young people are suffering from financial hardship at this time. However, unlike their peers, many foster youth have no family or support network to turn to for help navigating these challenges. We ask that you not forget them as you move forward in supporting our nation's recovery from COVID.

Thank you for your leadership and consideration.
